Part 2 Complete: You've Built Mental Clarity!

Let's celebrate your progress and review the powerful new skills in your toolkit.

Your New Toolkit for Taming Thoughts

You've just completed a huge step in your anxiety journey. You've learned the fundamental Cognitive Behavioral Therapy (CBT) skills for understanding and managing the mental side of anxiety. This is how you start to break the cycle.

🔺

The CBT Triangle

You can now see the direct link between a Thought, the Feeling it creates, and the Action you take.

🔍

Thinking Trap Spotting

You have a field guide to identify unhelpful patterns like Catastrophizing and Mind Reading as they happen.

⚖️

Thought Detective Work

You have three key questions to gently investigate anxious thoughts and find a more balanced, realistic perspective.

A Final Note from Your Guide

From Autumn: "I am so proud of you. These are not easy skills, and your commitment to practicing them is a true act of self-care. Remember, the goal isn't to stop having anxious thoughts—that's impossible. The goal is to change your relationship with them. You are learning to see them, question them, and choose your response. That is where your power lies."

What's Next in Your Toolkit?

Now that you have tools to manage your thoughts, we'll focus on what to do when emotions themselves feel overwhelming. In Part 3, you'll learn powerful skills from Dialectical Behavior Therapy (DBT) to handle intense feelings and navigate crisis moments with confidence.

Continue to Part 3