Worksheet 1.1: Your Sleep & Anxiety Baseline

> A quick note from David: "Welcome. I'm so glad you're taking this first step. Remember, this isn't a test or something you can fail. This is about gathering clues to understand your own patterns. Be curious, be patient, and most importantly, be kind to yourself through this process. You're exactly where you need to be."

Part 1: Your Monthly Sleep Snapshot (PSQI)

The Pittsburgh Sleep Quality Index (PSQI) is a standard tool used by clinicians to get a quick, reliable snapshot of your sleep over the last month. Completing this will give us a clear baseline to measure your progress against.

Instructions: Please donwload the printable worksheet in the next Lesson.

Part 2: Your 7-Day Sleep Diary

This is your most important tool for the week. Fill this out each morning for the next seven days. Don't worry about being perfectly precise—your best estimates are exactly what we need. The goal is to see patterns emerge between your days and your nights.

Day	Stress Level Today (1-10)	Time I Got Into Bed	Approx. Time to Fall Asleep (mins)	# of Times I Woke Up	Time I Got Out of Bed	Total Sleep Time (Estimate)	How I Felt Next Day (Tired, OK, Rested)
