REAL Psychiatric Services

Welcome to Part 3

Welcome! It's great to be on this next step of the journey with you.

You've done incredible work in Parts 1 and 2. You understand the science. You know the tools.

Our focus now? Making these skills a seamless part of your life.

You are the expert on your life. Together, we'll build a sustainable system that works for you.

Making It Automatic: The Habit Loop

Cue

The trigger that tells your brain to start the habit. Like dimming lights or setting an alarm.

Routine

The action itself. Your 15-minute wind-down ritual with specific activities.

Reward

The positive feeling that reinforces the loop. Feeling calm and getting better sleep.

Designing Your Evening

2-3 Hours Before Bed

Higher energy activities. Finish chores, pack lunch, wrap up conversations.

1 Hour Before Bed

The "Digital Sunset." Screens off. Shift to calming, low-stimulation hobbies.

15-30 Minutes Before Bed

Your Core Ritual. Dedicated activities that signal "it's time for sleep."

What Feels Right For You?

Mindfulness & Breath

5 minutes of guided meditation, 3 minutes of deep breathing, or a body scan relaxation exercise.

Gentle Sensory Input

Calm instrumental playlist, caffeine-free herbal tea, or pleasant-smelling lotion.

Low-Stimulation Activity

Read a physical book, do gentle stretching, or write in a gratitude journal.

The best ritual is one you'll actually do. Choose 2-3 calming activities that feel achievable.

Your Most Important Strategy

10 min

Nightly Ritual

A short ritual done consistently beats a lengthy one done occasionally.

100%

Commitment

Success comes from adherence to protocol, not heroic efforts.

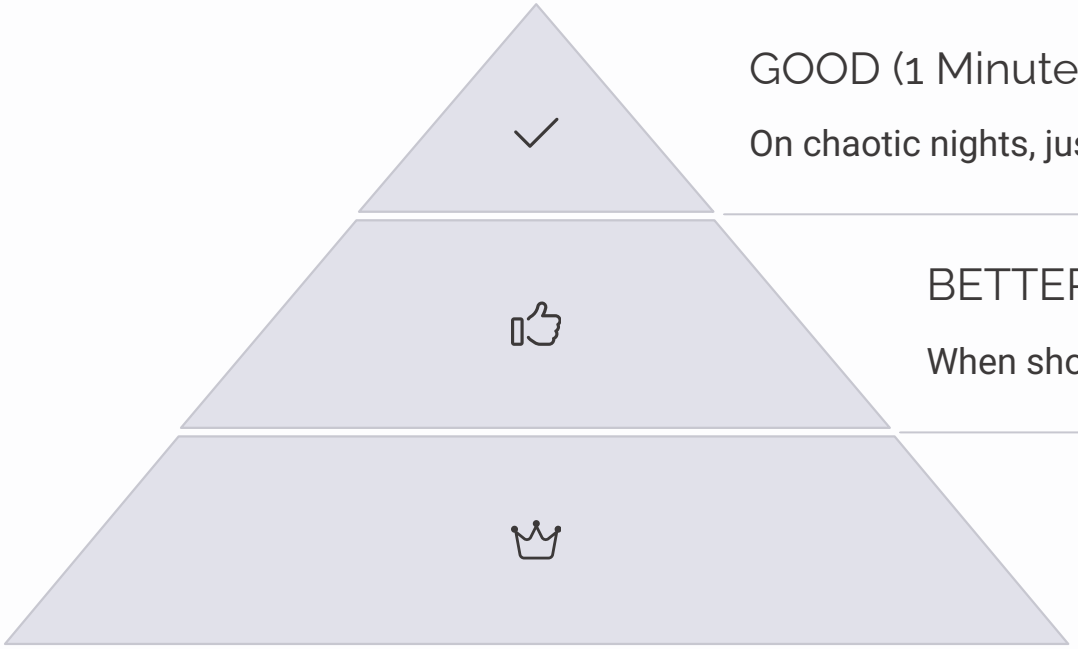
7

Nights Weekly

Aim for consistency rather than perfection.

From my experience in high-pressure environments, consistent small steps create lasting change.

How to Adapt When Life Gets Busy



GOOD (1 Minute)

On chaotic nights, just do 3-5 slow, deep breaths before bed.

BETTER (5 Minutes)

When short on time, do one core part of your ritual.

BEST (15+ Minutes)

Your full, personalized wind-down ritual.

Having this flexible plan removes pressure and makes consistency achievable.

Coming Up Next...

Light

Strategic light exposure to regulate your body clock.

Movement

How activity timing impacts sleep quality.

Caffeine

Smart consumption patterns for better rest.

You've designed the blueprint for your evening ritual. This is your anchor. Next, we'll expand our focus to support your sleep during daytime hours.

About Phillip Jaskot, PMHNP-BC

From your initial meeting with Phillip, you'll notice his steady confidence and genuine empathy. With over six years of experience as an ICU and Interventional Radiology nurse, Phillip is adept at navigating high-pressure situations—skills he now channels into calm, focused, and thoughtful mental health support. As a board-certified Psychiatric Mental Health Nurse Practitioner, he blends clinical rigor with a warm, approachable style, making it easy to open up and feel truly heard.

Phillip's approach is rooted in collaboration, empathy, and respect. He believes mental wellness flourishes when every facet of your world is considered: relationships, daily routines, stressors, and strengths. He creates a safe, supportive space where your questions are always welcome and every treatment decision is made together.

> "You're the expert on your life. I'm here to listen, guide, and offer options—whether that's therapy techniques, lifestyle tweaks, or medication—so you feel empowered every step of the way."

Patients describe Phillip as collaborative, transparent, and deeply respectful. He is committed to honest communication and guiding you through your mental health journey with confidence.
